JOHN SHORTS.

John Shorts, a British soldier of Swiss origin, is said to have served in the war which ended in the conquest of Canada, 1756-1763. It is related that he had been a soldier in the expedition which captured and destroyed Fort Frontenac, now Kingston, in 1758.

When the war was at an end, John Shorts received his discharge in America, and settled along the Susquehanna River, on the Pennsylvania-New York border. It was about this time that he married Rosannah Monk, in 1764.

At the outbreak of the American Revolution, John Shorts remained loyal to British institutions and joined Butler's Rangers. Very shortly thereafter he was taken prisoner by the rebels and is said to have died in New York City in 1776.

Shortly after the death of her husband, his estate having been confiscated, Mrs. Shorts and her five children, in company with other Loyalists, were piloted through the woods by an Indian of Iroquois, and reached the British lines at Niagara.

The continuing arrival of newcomers from the rebel colonies put a great strain on the Commandant at Niagara, which was at that time no more than an outpost. Nearly all supplies came from Montreal. Shipments often took three weeks to ascend the St. Lawrence River and cross Lake Ontario. It, therefore, became the policy of the authorities to transport as many refugees as possible to the Montreal area, where housing and provisions were more readily available.

For these reasons, Mrs. Shorts and her five children, with other refugees, were transported in open boats down the lake and river towards Montreal. Mrs. Shorts, however, never completed the journey. She died of exposure at Pointe Claire, just west of Montreal. Her orphaned children, ranging in age from one to twelve years, found asylum in the Montreal area, where they remained 'till the war was over.

The SHORTT FAMILY

(Compiled by Kenneth C. Shortt, 823 Simcoe Street, S., Oshawa).

Adam Shortt was a Prussian soldier originally spelling his name "Kurz."

Kurtz was an apprentices weaver in his own country and disliked his master and trade, he ran away to Hanover where he was recruited for soldiering under George III.

A place was selected to stay in the new world settling on 500 acres on the High Shore, Sophiaburg. He changed his name to "Shortt" by translating it in order to get along with his British and American neighbours.

Shortt served with the British and left them and made his way through the American lines to New Jersey. He lived there 15 years, working as a weaver.

He left New Jersey about 1800 with his wife, nee Odell, and four children, settling at Green Point on the Bay of Quinte, in Sophiaburg.

He lived here many years, working as a weaver until shortly before the death of his 2nd wife. At the time of his death, he was in possession of over 600 acres of land and prosperous.

Adam Shortt married a widow by the name of Ferguson who had married twice previously to Henry Garretts and Lebbeus Clark. She died two years after Adam's passing in 1869 aged 66. Adam Shortt was past 94 when he died in 1884.

Adam Shortt had four children by Miss Odell: John, Mary, Jacob and Elizabeth; and Mary and Adam J. by his second wife.

Adam Shortt married Miss Odell in the Colonies soon after in New York and New Jersey. Adam Shortt died 1870, death 1854. He married twice. The widow Ferguson who was previously married to Henry Garretts and Hezekiah Clark was born in 1794 and died 1869.
